7:38 AM • BUILT OVERNIGHT FROM YOUR CALENDAR, INBOX, AND THREADS

What it already knows: every open decision you're carrying, who owes you what, the deals in motion, and how you write. Nothing here is a generic feed — it is your business, sorted by what needs you first.

Needs you before noon

Three things are waiting on you and only you. Ranked by what's blocking other people.

Decide: renew or renegotiate the freight contract

BLOCKING

Raised by your COO · 3-year term, ~$2.1M · the Q1 plan can't be finalized until this lands

Approve the Q1 hiring plan

OVERDUE

9 roles across sales and fulfillment · submitted to you 19 hours ago

Sign the revised offer for the finance lead

TODAY

Candidate has a competing offer · expires Friday

Drafted in your voice

Written and waiting in your drafts. Each one reads like you wrote it. Review, adjust, send.

Reply to your board chair on the Q3 numbers

DRAFT

Pulls the three figures she asked about · ready to review and send

Follow-up to the regional distributor

DRAFT

References exactly what you committed to on Tuesday's call

Caught for you

Things that would have slipped past in a normal inbox.

A line item on the revised vendor invoice that was never agreed to.

A $14,200 "expedite fee" appeared on the latest invoice from your packaging supplier. It is not in the signed terms, and it was not on the prior two invoices. Flagged before it went to AP for payment. Want a note drafted to the vendor?

Your day

Five meetings. Two are prepped already — briefs are linked in your calendar.

09:00

Deep work — protected. Q1 narrative for the board. One doc, no meetings, no notifications.

10:30

1:1 with your VP of Sales. Brief ready · 3 open items, one you owe her.

12:00

Lunch with a potential channel partner. Prep ready · who they are, where you last left it.

14:00

Weekly exec team. Agenda built from last week's still-open decisions.

16:00

Hold for the freight decision, if you want it off your plate today.

Quiet movement

No action needed. Worth knowing.

The fulfillment SLA project shipped on time

DONE

Your ops lead closed it yesterday · the thing you flagged as at-risk three weeks ago

A reporter from a trade publication asked for comment

FYI

Routed to your comms contact · no response needed from you unless you want to weigh in
